The Question of Biennial Sessions Again Comes Up.

WORK ON THE APPROPRIATIONS.

The Session Will Probably Be Prolonged by the Senate Until About the Middle of May or Later-Facts About the Tax Levy-Will the Haskell Local Option Bill Pass ?-Woman Suffrage-Transferring Local Funds.

COLUMBUS, O., April 17. The question of biennial sessions has again poked itself to the front, but there is little danger of anything serious coming of it. One of the Columbus mem. bers, Captain Felton, no doubt in behalf of the Columbus hotels and hotelkeepers, cess on the 30th of this month until the last of next January. The resolution further provides that the house finance committee shall have the appropriation bill ready to be introduced when the legislature convenes. The captain does not seem to be aware that the bill has already been introduced and on his desk of the local option might be frightened away from its support if too many new has introduced a resolution to take a rethis the committee is ready to make its away from its support if too many new fangled notions are indulged in. The report on this bill for next year and put twoman suffrage bill passed the senate by it upon its passage. The preamble to a most decisive vote. Its chances in the the captain's resolution is about as bare of statements of facts as is his resolution of ideas. Of course there is some restivestanding in the lower branch. It is a ness at this time of the year, especially among the farmers, about being compelled to stay in Columbus when their business at home is suffering. Still there is no doubt but that the legislature could be adjourned within three weeks if the senate so determined, whereas it will be four to five weeks before that desired end is reached.

The only two able-bodied excuses that the perennialists had when the question was at its height were that the appropriations could not be made for two years and that one session was not enough in which to pass revenue measures which were necessary to raise the receipts of the state up to the desired figure. Already the

is far enough along to disprove the claim as to them, and the house taxation committee has reported five or six bills to the house that will bring in about a million dollars a year without any direct levy for state purposes. Two of the measures have already passed the house and the others are special orders for tomorrow. The senate has already one of the first bills upon its calendar with a court, where the law under which the bonds were issued was declared to be unconstitutional. This was a serious disadvantage to the bondholders. Another ought to finish the work on all these bills in both houses, and the same length of time ought to be ample for the senate to consider the second appropriation bill after putting in five or six weeks on the first. Attention was called a few weeks ago to the Small Amount Levied For State Purpose especially as compared with levies made for local purposes. Perhaps a resume of the levies for the state, as made during the past nine or 10 years, would not be uninteresting or unprofitable. For many years up to 1884 the total levy for state purposes was 2.9 mills, 1.4 of which was for the general revenue fund, .5 of a mill for the sinking fund and 1 mill for the school fund. In 1884 the levy for the general fund was reduced .1 of a mill, making the total for all purposes 2.8 mills. In 1885 the tenth was restored to the general revenue fund levy and an other tenth was added, making the total for all purposes 2.9 mills. Since 1885 this amount, 1.4 mills, has been retained for general revenue purposes unchanged-The total amount of 2.9 mills was retained for all purposes from 1885 to 1888 when the levy for sinking fund purpose was reduced .2 of a mill, making it .3 of a mill. This reduction made the levy for all purposes during that period 2.7 mills. This rate was continued until 1891, when the rate for the sinking fund was dropped for one year because of the money received from the general government on the return of the direct war tax; but a levy was made that year of 1-20 of a mill for the Ohio State university, so that the total for that year was 2.45 mills. In 1802 the .3 of a mill for the sinking fund was restored, making the total for all purposes 2.75 mills, and that is the rate down to the present

Thus it will be seen that the levy for all state purposes is .15 of a mili less this year than it was 11 years ago and than it was for many years previous to that time—that it is .03 of a mill less than it was in 1884, .15 less than it was in 1885 to 1888, but .05 of a mill more than it was in 1888 to 1891, and that the only year when there was any material wering of the tax rate was in 1891. when the state got a million dollars in the shape of a windfall.

The State Derives About $2,500,000 from the tax levy for general revenue purposes; the other million that it gets es from the secretary of state's office, the pentientiary, the insurance department and many miscellaneous sources. The revenue ought to be $4,000,000 a year, and it is espected that the bills that are now pending will increase the receipts to that figure, besides sillowing for a decrease in the already low levy above set forth.

Haskell Local Option Bill. The amount of figuring that is going on concerning the probable entering of the Haskell local option bill would do credit to a senatorial contest. The leaders of both sides of the house and of both bers over which they are bending their shoulders and bowing their heads in vain efforts to mravel the mystery of the future. The votes on the different amendments last Wednesday and Thursday and the matter of postponement, which finally went through by a vote of 41 to 49, serve as the keys to the situation. But as many members voted first this way and then that, these keys are found to be for the wrong locks, and no one has yet satisfied even himself that he is right in any prognostication that he may be willing to make public. Last Wednesday night after the first afternoom's struggle, when the friends of the bill were on top, it was figured by those who were against the bill that it would have passed if it could have been forced to a vote by 55 to 60 votes, but this was before the prolonged struggle of Thursday, and before a night's repose and a night's hustling on the part of the enemies of the measure—and much can be accomplished when determined men start out to do it. What the outcome would be after the postponement it is hard to say. The bill was postponed for two weeks and the author of the bill was not sharp enough to make it a special order, and the consequence is that the bill will simply go upon the calendar for that day and then be reached in its regular turn, which means that it will probably never be reached this year, at least not so as to be of any particular good, for it would not have time to get through the seeate; in fact it would be from three to four weeks in working its way up on the calendar after it had obtained its first footing thereon next week Wednesday. Of course an effort to make it its first footing thereon next week Wednesday. Of course an effort to make it a special order may rescue it from oblivion; that is the only hope now, and even if that is done the bill has a long, hard road before it will find its place song the statutes of the state. The Woman's Suffrage Bill, strange coincidence that the leaders against the local option bill are all, with one exception, friends of the woman's suffrage bill, whereas the leaders of the local option bill and its most constant supporters, also with one exception, are the enemies of woman suffrage. Mr. Haskell himself, the author of the local option bill, has always been an opponent of woman suffrage. The same may also be said of Speaker pro tem. Southard, who is one of Mr. Haskell's chief advis-

The Question of the State's Moral Liability for the bonds issued by Wayne county for the purchase of land for the experiment farm now located at Wooster has been brought to the front by recent court decisions and the offer from the Ohio Farmers' Insurance company to turn the bonds over for their face value. A brief statement of the history of this case is apropos. Wayne county offers to give the state of Ohio $35,000 to locate the experiment farm within her borders. A law was enacted under which the county bonded itself for the $85,000. This was turned into the state treasury and the land at Wooster was purchased. This angered the people at Orrville, in the same county, which town was also a contestant for the prize. Between the Orrville citizens, a man who was supposed to be crazy and a railroad a suit was begun, which went to the supreme suit was begun, however, to compel the payment of the tax levied to pay off the bonds on the part of those who consented to the issuing of the bonds at the time they were negotiated. The circuit court has already decided that those who acquiesced in the proceedings at the time the bonds were issued or who have since acquiesced by the payment of their taxes are estopped from any relief through the courts. If the supreme court decides in the same manner Wayne county will not be forced to repudiate her debt. In the meantime the insurance company has been forced to ask the state to relieve it from any further participation in the trouble, as they have already been hurt in their business by the reputation thus far attained. It is likely that the state will pay off the bonds and in turn wait until the courts have decided what is to be done in the matter. If Wayne county can pay this debt and collect a tax to do it then the state will lose nothing, if the county can not then the state would still be nothing out, it having had the money and apent heretofore for its own purposes.

There probably hasn't been a general assembly in 20 years in which there has not been an effort made to do away with the necessity of Transferring Funds For Local Authorities by acts of the legislature. But the fact is that the constitution provides that the legislature must do this work, and it has been decided many times that a legislative body can not delegate any of its work to any other person, municipality or corporation. And when one stops to think of it, it is a good thing that funds can only be transferred by legislative enactment. The legislature in the first place authorizes all tax levies. If too much money were raised under a tax levy for a very legitimate purpose, and one which the legislature would not hesitate to grant, it would not be right to transfer that extra amount so raised to some other fund, for which perhaps the Transferring Funds For Local Authorities some other fund, for which perhaps the legislature would hesitate before allowing a levy to be made. When funds can only be transferred in so public a way as by a bill through the legislature, and then, of course, only when the legisla-sure is in section; there is not aprito be so much chicanery as might otherwise creep in. It was one of those wise pro-visions that the framers of the constitu-tion allowed to stand and which the peotion allowed to stand and which the peo-ple have to think twice before they see its use—yet its use is none the less im-portant. A bill to place this power of transferring funds in the hands of some local court has already passed the senato-but it will not get through the house. Last year a bill was ready to be yet don in the house maker where was in the house and everybody was projur-ing to vote a, e when a member "cal e the constitution on the measure. saying is here, and the author himseasked to have its bill indefautely to t

A MEMBER OF THE HOUSE. OHID LEGISLATURE.

Thursday. House—The Haskell local option bill was the one subject of discussion, and further consideration was postponed for further consideration was postponed for two weeks. One important bill was enacted into a law. It was Senator McMaken's bill to levy a tax on the railroads, not to exceed $50,000, for the support of the department of railroads and telegraphs.

SENATE—Bills passed: Increasing the fee for issuing marriage licenses from 75 cents to $2; increasing the fees for filing petitions in the supreme court from $5 to $20, and for filing a motion from $2 to $40; limiting the height of freighters at 14 feet, requiring all bridges over railroads to be 21 feet high.

Thursday.

SENATE—A joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment relating to marriage and divorce was introduced and referred to the committee on judiciary. The emergency deficiency bill was considered and the tariff debate continued.

House—The Democratic managers of the house decided to take heroic measures to force the Republicans to participate in the proceedings. The committee on rules held a meeting just before the house convened and formulated a rule to crush fillbustering, making the penalty of failure to vote punishable by a fine. The Republicans, having cognizance of the rule by which their hands were to be tied before the meeting of the house, Mesers. Reed and Burrows determined to contest every inch of the ground, and a fierce parliamentary fight was immediately precipitated. Senator Crisp, hewever, was in no humor for triffing, and with a stern hand he swept aside all preliminaries and forced the fight for the main issue. for the main issue.

House-The struggle over the adoption of the new rule to secure a voting quorum was resumed. No quorum being present, the house adjourned. The Democrats then caucussed to adopt new rules. Rules similar to those of "Czar" Reed were adopted. SENATE—The tariff debate was contin-
